Mike Narey - 2018 Contributor

Raised in Waterloo, Mike Narey has spent over four decades involved with state and national wrestling. Living in Iowa City in 1973, he founded Quality Mat--a mat refinishing business. He moved the company to Waterloo in 1981 and five years later purchased a large building at 410 Rath Street. The business boomed and developed a nationwide reputation for its attention to quality and service. At its peak in the late 1990s and early 2000s, Quality Mat had over 20 employees and serviced mats around the United States, Canada, Japan and Europe. Always willing to promote wrestling, Mike provided mats for the first Junior National tournaments in Iowa City and continued doing so at the UNI Dome when the massive event moved to Cedar Falls. "Gary Kurdelmeier [the late head coach at Iowa] was a big factor in the business expanding," said Mike. "He got us in on the ground floor at the Junior Nationals in Iowa City and that allowed us to meet and make friends with coaches from across the nation. That was huge!" But it was Jon Marks, a close confidant to both Kurdelmeier and his assistant coach at the time, Dan Gable, who encouraged Mike to try the business. "Jon was the guy who got me started," said Mike. "He introduced me to the right people and Jon played a key role in Quality Mat's early successes." Quality Mat has provided mats for the Iowa State wrestling championships in Des Moines, the DII championships at Young Arena, the Battle of Waterloo for a couple years, camps at Iowa, UNI and Wartburg and has worked closely with those programs in other areas as well. Mike said guys like Bernie Stroh, who served as Quality Mat office manager for over two decades, were key to the company's growth in addition to Dave Moses and Tony Cordes, former state champions at West Waterloo. "Bernie handled a lot of the marketing and operations," said Mike. "Tony Cordes was the perfect artist for school mascots, and Dave Moses is one of the hardest workers I've ever known. Both were major, major assets." Others who Mike singled out for their contributions are Vic Marcucci, former NCAA champion at Iowa State; Jim Zalesky, three-time NCAA champion at Iowa; Jim Miller, former head coach at Wartburg and former high school coaches Bob Siddens, Don Huff and Steve Knipp. "They all helped out in various ways through the years," said Mike. And being close friends with Dan Gable for many decades was also a big boost when he was growing the business, he quickly added. Mike attended Columbus High School, Ellsworth Junior College and graduated from Drake in 1968 with a degree in political science. Quality Mat closed its doors in 2014. Mike is now retired and still lives in Waterloo.
